Oxfordshire Artweeks 2017

Welcome to the 35th Oxfordshire Artweeks festival during which you can see, for free, spectacular art at hundreds of places, in artists' homes and studios, along village trails and city streets, in galleries and gardens. It is your chance, whether a seasoned art enthusiast or an interested newcomer to enjoy art in a relaxed way, to meet the makers and see their creative talent in action.

Artweeks is a not-for-profit organisation and relies upon the generous support of many people to whom we're most grateful as we bring this celebration of the visual arts to you. We are thrilled to be sponsored for 2017 by West Waddy ADP, a multi-disciplinary practice combining Architects, Town Planners and Urban Designers in one consultancy. They are based in Abingdon, are passionate about place-making through design and they are delighted to support Artweeks and help offer you all the chance to bring art, design and a fresh look into your own spaces.

Our cover this year is a wire sculpture by Rachel Ducker who welcomes you to her Jericho studio (venue 403).

Browse the listings and the accompanying website where you'll find hundreds of examples of artists' work, and pick the exhibitions that most appeal to you: from the traditional to the contemporary, and with drawing to printmaking, furniture to fashion, silverware, sculpture and more, there's masses to explore. We hope you are inspired by the pieces on show and find some treasures to take home with you.

ART

Celebrating the Human Form

In Oxford's renowned Pitt Rivers Museum, full of anthropological artefacts and fascinating finds, several cases display objects that are classified as 'Human Form in Art'. Although they display enormous diversity in materials, techniques, function, beliefs, and notions of beauty, they all highlight the shared humanity of the cultures represented. Today, in almost all cultures around the world, the enduring theme that is the human figure remains central to decorative art.

The earliest known representations of the human body were found in Europe and date back to between 25,000 and 12,000 years ago. Carved from stone and ivory, these 'Venus' figures represent the female form and they have been associated with fertility. Human figures in other materials are including the cave paintings of early Europe and in the rock paintings of southern Africa. Although there is no way of telling for certain, the production and meaning of art amongst these cultures was probably spiritual, the figures perhaps representing deities or specially important people. Shallow carvings of subsistence human figures in rocks in western Sweden from 7000-5000 BCE, for example, are thought to reflect Bronze Age myths or religious episodes involving combat and dancing. By 5000 years ago, in Ancient Egypt, it then became more common for non-spiritual persons to be depicted and for the human form to feature in more secular contexts.

The German philosopher Kant (1724-1804) refers to the human figure as the ideal of beauty, and the study and representation of the human body's beauty underpins its presentation in art, sculpture and other forms of expression. Figure drawing involves the depiction of the body in different poses, in motion, at rest, and much sculpture is a three dimensional approach to the same end. Both involve a working knowledge of body shape, including body posture (sitting, standing or sleeping) and movement (walking, running or dancing). After all, the human figure conforms to the general law stating that form follows function, a result of evolution over thousands of generations. The appearance musculature of Michelangelo's studies, for example, owes much to his study of anatomy and musculoskeletal structure through observation, and today an acclaimed Leonardo da Vinci

Mary Moser Award Winner 2017 Introducing Andrew Harrison

Andrew Harrison grew up in a northern coal mining town and the most obvious escape route from the mine was to join the army. He took an army apprenticeship to learn carpentry and joinery, spending five years as a Combat Engineer before becoming a diplomatic courier. As part of an international team working in Sierra Leone, it was from the locals there that Andrew learnt how to carve wood. Back at RAF Brize Norton he bought a lathe and started wood-turning. Now a sculptor and gallery-owner, Andrew still loves working with wood and the many different patternations and textures.

During Artweeks, his sculpture will be on show in the SOTA Gallery in Witney (venue 137) and at the Oxfordshire Craft Guild exhibition in Chipping Norton (venue 231).

This annual award was established to honour Mary Moser's commitment to Artweeks and to help develop the career of a professional artist who has taken up art as a second career later in life.

Previous winners include:

Caroline Chappell in Middleton Cheney (painting; venue 182)

Caroline Meynell in Great Milton (painting; venue 113)

Kamal Koria in Oxford (painting; venue 373)

Wendy Newhofer in Great Milton (glass art; venue 114)

Martin Smith in Summertown (sculpture; venue 432)

Crabby Taylor in Wilcote (ceramics; venue 281)

Jane Duff in Little Wittenham (painting; venue 82)

For Artweeks, three vibrant and supportive art spaces are hosting 'open' exhibitions into which any visual artist across the county could submit a piece of their work and these are hosted by:

The Jam Factory, Oxford: Annual Open exhibition (venue 372)

The Mill Arts Centre, Banbury: Wood and Stone (venue 192)

The Michael Heseltine Gallery, Middleton Cheney: South Northamptonshire & North Oxfordshire Annual Selected Open Exhibition (venue 183)

Many Artweeks venues hold events, demonstrations and family activities. Check venue listings on-line for further details.

ARE YOU

- a passionate artist or designer-maker who is keen to show your work, share your skills and/or inspire others?
- an enthusiastic amateur who would like to develop your art with feedback and sales?
- an emerging artist looking to build your profile?
- a seasoned professional looking for a new market and/or commissions?

Many full time artists including acclaimed Sculptor Chris Townsend and prize-winning glass artist Wendy Newhofer took their first steps to becoming a professional artist or designer-maker with an Artweeks exhibition.

'I am enormously grateful to Oxfordshire Artweeks which enabled me, as a beginner, to share my work with the public. The positive feedback I got on my first Artweeks exhibition encouraged me to go on working and making. Without Artweeks, I don't think I would have had the courage to launch myself as a professional jeweller.'

Leonie Bennett

'I have found out in my first year as a member of Artweeks that it is more than just showing work in one's studio: it is about contact with people, recognition by the public and being seen regularly so people become familiar with one's work. Being part of Artweeks led me to other places in that first year as a full-time artist and I have now exhibited further afield on the strength of the confidence Artweeks gave me.'
